The Big Red Heart

One day the Color Kids were out walking in a beautiful green field. The sun was shining brightly and the three friends were talking.
"I worked very hard to make this big field so colorful," said Patty O'Green. "Finding enough green Star Sprinkles was a big job!"
"And I spent hours finding enough yellow ones to make the sun shine so brightly," added Canary Yellow.
"I hope Rainbow Brite will like it."

Red Butler smiled at the two girls. "I'm sure she will," he said. "But I don't know why you had to work so hard. I always have plenty of red Star Sprinkles to deliver at a moment's notice. I guess that's why Rainbow Brite likes me best!"

Just then, Rainbow Brite came riding up on Starlite.
"Is it true?" Canary Yellow and Patty O'Green chimed.
"Red Butler says you like him best." The two little girl's eyes were full of tears.

Rainbow Brite saw how hurt they were and she was upset. "Of course not," she said, looking at Red Butler. "How could you even say such a thing!"

"Oh, Red Butler!" Rainbow Brite cried. "You and your bragging! I don't want to hear another word!" With that, she turned Starlite around and galloped off.

"Why don't you do something nice for Rainbow Brite to show her you're sorry?" suggested Patty O'Green.

"Yes, that's it!" Red Butler replied. "I'll get Romeo sprite to help me!"

The two went to work right away, building a big red heart. Then, they blew up lots of red balloons and tied them in a row along Rainbow Brite's favorite riding path. When they were finished, they sat down to wait for Rainbow Brite.

Red Butler had almost given up hope when Rainbow Brite and Starlite came galloping down the path. Starlite saw the red balloons and came to a halt.

"Look Rainbow Brite!" he whinnied. "Red balloons — everywhere!"

"Yes," she replied, "and they seem to be leading somewhere. How curious! Let's follow them!" Rainbow Brite and Starlite made their way down the path. In an instant, they saw the giant red heart. "Oh, Starlite, look!" Rainbow Brite exclaimed. "It's as big as the sky...and so beautiful!"

"And it has your name on it!" neighed Starlite. Suddenly, Red Butler and Romeo sprite popped out from behind the sky-high heart. "Do you like it?" Red Butler asked, hopefully.

"Do I ever!" smiled Rainbow Brite.
"I'm sorry I upset you so," said Red Butler. "Can you ever forgive me?"

"Oh Red Butler! Of course I can!" replied Rainbow Brite, dropping to the ground, laughing and giving him a big hug. "Sometimes you say silly things, but you have a big heart!"
